JUBILATION IN BROOKLYN OVER PILLBURY'S VICTORY.

TALK OF A BIG MATCH AT ST. PETERSBURG—SCORE OF THE AMERICAN CHAMPION—

PROBLEMS AND CORRESPONDENCE.

The "unconquered" joy over Pillsbury's wonderful victory at Hastings is by no means limited to the devotees of chess. The distinctly American flavor of the triumph is grateful to the whole American people—even to her adopted children, who are proud of the achievement of a genuine son of the country of their choice. But to those near of kin to the old Bunker Hill stock there is something so exhilarating about the performance that an overheard speech of a later day pilgrim may be pardoned: "We raise them, right down there," pointing toward New-England, "they can lick all creation when they try."

All the world loves a hero and when he is young, full of patriotism, unconquerable in the field, and modest within, his country takes him to her arms with swelling pride in his possession.

Last Sunday's story of the battle of Hastings included the nineteenth round, and so exciting and close then was the contest that Pillsbury's favorable position was all that could be shown. The later cable reports to The Tribune of the same day carried the fight a step further and left America just in front for the final struggle on September 2.

The story of that day's brilliant triumph has been already described and the intrepidity and cleverness of the young American's play commented upon. His dispatch, that he had won for America, Brooklyn and himself, seems to have touched the popular heart as a modest, manly message, eloquent in its simplicity.

Further details from the Hastings tournament are coming by mail and it will be a week before all the interesting tidings are received. The later Pillsbury games particularly will be looked for eagerly. In the mean time a table of his score is appended:

Round.	Antagonist.	Opening.	Moves.	Score.
1.	Tarrasch.	Queen's gambit dec.	32	Won.
2.	Marshall.	Queen's gambit dec.	32	Drawn.
3.	Salwey.	Ruy Lopez.	30	Won.
4.	Albin.	Ruy Lopez.	30	Won.
5.	Mieses.	Vienna.	29	Won.
6.	Steuernagel.	Queen's gambit dec.	30	Won.
7.	Schiffers.	Evans gambit.	41	Won.
8.	Brannwald.	Queen's gambit dec.	30	Won.
9.	Maass.	Queen's gambit dec.	30	Won.
10.	Teichmann.	Ruy Lopez.	31	Won.
11.	Blackburne.	Bishop's gambit.	79	Drawn.
12.	Blackburne.	Bishop's gambit.	79	Drawn.
13.	Walbrodt.	Ruy Lopez.	29	Drawn.
14.	Burn.	Queen's gambit dec.	25	Won.
15.	Blackburne.	P-4.	4	Lost.
16.	Schlechter.	Queen's gambit dec.	48	Lost.
17.	Blackburne.	Queen's gambit dec.	48	Lost.

19.	Gunderson.	Queen's gambit dec.	40	Won.
20.	Verani.	Queen's gambit dec.	40	Won.

As is known, America won first prize, Russia second prize, England third prize, Germany fourth prize, America fifth prize, Russia sixth prize and England and Germany tied for seventh prize.

At the Brooklyn Chess Club it has been a gala week since Monday afternoon, and the festivities show no sign of abatement. The clubrooms are draped with the American flag, and the walls festooned with congratulatory telegrams and letters.

From London and from Hastings, over the ocean, and from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Newark, Staten Island, Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, New Orleans, in fact, from every prominent chess club in the country, except the Manhattan Chess Club, cheers for Pillsbury, and congratulations to the Brooklyn Chess Club for sending him, have been coming in. From Hastings H. E. Dobell, the secretary of the tournament, writes to the Brooklyn Chess Club:

"Mr. Pillsbury has made a great reputation here. His games are always one of the chief centers of attraction. You must be very proud of him. Mr. Dobell also wishes it announced that the 'Book of the Tournament,' annotated by the winners, will be brought out by Chatto & Windus, Piccadilly, London, at 7s. 6d. a copy. Mr. Dobell adds the pleasing intelligence that financially also the tournament was successful."

Pillsbury also writes: "When this reaches you in the final game I have been playing, and I am exceedingly hopeful of success. In the seven games yet before us Lasker has the first move in five, and it is possible that this may turn the scale in my favor. But I do not wish to give up. It will not be through lack of effort."

"After having decidedly the best of Lasker (a pawn ahead), I played with bad judgment, in fact, stupidly, and lost."

You will notice the St. Petersburg Chess Club's proposition in the copy of Teichmann's speech which I inclose you, and it is really with a feeling of satisfaction, not alone for myself, but for Brooklyn and for America, that I find I am considered among the first five players of the world. Coming as this does totally unexpected, I can only say that I am deeply grateful to my friends for kind remarks which have enabled me to reach this point."

Now expect to return on the American liner leaving Southampton September 15.

Teichmann's speech, which Pillsbury mentions in connection with the proposition of the St. Petersburg Chess Club, was made at Hastings at a public dinner there, and he said that the St. Petersburg club wished to arrange a contest between five of the chess champions of the world, and that the club was of the opinion, which he fully shared, that this tournament would not be complete unless Pillsbury took part in it. Mr. Teichmann said that the club wished to see all the expenses of the five champions and give prizes, to the first 100, and to each of them less than 200. Instead of a one-round tournament, with so few players, there would be three or four rounds, the tournament to take place next winter. It was hoped that this arrangement would meet with the approval of the chess world.

Appended are fifteen chess games from the Hastings congress, making the total number of games as published in The Tribune 137 out of 230 played:
